Dolwyddelan—The Birth Place of Llewellyn the Great

THE HARVIE FAMILY

Tradition tells us that the Harvies sprang from Llewellyn, the last native Prince of Wales. The name has always been preserved in the family.

Col. John Harvie was born at Gargannock, in the shire of Sterling, North Britain. He removed from Scotland to Virginia and settled in Albemarle County about forty years before the Revolutionary War. His wife's maiden name was Gaines, a name which her relative, Edmund Pendleton, has rendered famous. He had nine children—four sons and five daughters. After his death his wife moved to Georgia with all of her children except her eldest son, John, who inherited his father's place, "Belmont", in Albemarle County, Virginia. Col. Harvie was Thomas Jefferson's guardian, and one of Jefferson's earliest letters which survive was addressed to Col. John Harvie at "Belmont", January 14, 1740. He wrote:

"Sir:

I was at Colo. Peter Randolph's about a fortnight ago, and my schooling falling into Discourse, he said he thought it would be to my Advantage to go to the College, and was desirous I should go, as indeed I am myself for several Reasons. In the first place as long as I stay at the Mountain, the loss of one fourth of my Time is inevitable, by company's coming here and detaining me from School. And likewise my Absence will in a measure, put a stop to so much Company, and by that means lessen the Expenses of the Estate in Housekeeping. And on the other Hand by going to College, I shall get a more universal Acquaintance, which may hereafter be serviceable to me; and I suppose I can pursue my Studies in the Greek and Latin as well there as here, and likewise learn something of the Mathematics. I shall be Glad of your opinion, And remain, Sir, your most humble servant,"

"Thomas Jefferson Jr."

Col. John Harvie, son of John Harvie and Martha Gaines, was born in Albemarle County, Va., in the year 1742. He died at his seat, "Belvidere", near Richmond, 1807. He married Margaret Norton, daughter of Gabriel Jones and Margaret Strother. He was a gentleman of high character and proud bearing, and otherwise distinguished among his countrymen. In early life he became a successful lawyer in the county of Albemarle and soon thereafter conspicuous and influential among the public men of the day.

He represented West Augusta and Augusta counties in the convention of Delegates during the sessions of 1775-76 respectively, and was appointed by the Virginia Convention jointly with Thomas Walker, a commissioner, to treat with the Indians at Fort Pitt, with plenary powers to conduct, continue or close the Indian War. The following is taken from the American Archives:

"Convention of Virginia, at Richmond, Tuesday, March 21, 1775:

" A letter from the inhabitants of that part of Augusta County, which lies to the westward of the Alleghany mountains, desiring that John Newell and John Harvie, Esqs., may be admitted into this convention as their delegates, being read, upon a motion "resolved, That the said John Newell and John Harvie be admitted as delegates for the County of Augusta."

"Convention of Virginia, at Williamsburg, Thursday, May 30, 1776:

"Resolved, That the execution of the former resolutions of this convention for engaging such Indian warriors of the neighboring tribes as are willing to march to the assistance of this colony be postponed until the twentieth day of July next, and that they be not then carried into execution, unless the same should be judged expedient by Thomas Walker and John Harvie, Esqrs."

Colonel John Harvie was a member of the Continental Congress during the most critical period of the Revolution and warmly supported General Washington.

In behalf of the State of Virginia, he signed the Articles of Confederation with Richard Henry Lee, John Bannister, Thomas Adams, and Frances Lightfoot Lee, his colleagues in the Continental Congress of 1778, he being recognized as the confidential friend of General Washington. Colonel Harvie was a signer of the Bill of Rights, and was also an intimate friend of Thomas Jefferson and Robert Morris.

When General Washington endowed Washington College with the stock of the State in the James River Canal donated to him by Virginia, Colonel Harvie had already surrendered to that company gratuitously the right of way through his property in and about the city of Richmond.

By his great business and financial ability, combined with universal confidence in his integrity, he amassed a large fortune, and for many years was identified with enterprises connected with the growth and prosperity of Richmond and the State of Virginia. Colonel Harvie's residence on Eleventh and Clay Street, Richmond, Virginia, continued one of the outstanding landmarks of the city down into the present time.

Colonel Harvie was Mayor of Richmond and was Registrar of the Land Office of Virginia when Kentucky, Ohio and the Great Northwest Territory, which Virginia surrendered to the General Government, were embraced within her limits. His parents were Scotch Highlanders, and the family emigrated to America. Colonel Harvie spent his life in Virginia, his brothers and sisters going to Georgia to live. By his marriage to Margaret Jones, whose father was Gabriel Jones, Colonel Harvie left four sons, Lewis, John, Edwin and Jacquelin—and three daughters—Gabriella, Emily and Julia.

1st. Lewis was elected to the Legislature in early manhood and served one year with great distinction. He had been previously one of President Jefferson's private secretaries. Seized with some pulmonary disease, he was advised to take a sea voyage and died at sea. His remains were brought back to Virginia and buried at St. Paul's Church, Norfolk, Virginia.

2nd. John inherited his father's estate at Belmont, in Albemarle County, Virginia, which he disposed of and moved to Kentucky. He married his cousin, Margaret Hawkins, and was for eight successive years elected by the Legislature president of the State Bank of Kentucky. He was appointed by the Governor and Senate a member of the First State Board of Internal Improvements, and represented his county, Franklin, in the Legislature of 1835-36. He was greatly beloved, and died leaving three sons and two daughters, John, Lewis E., Mrs. Breathitt, Lleyellyn and Ellen.

3rd. The third son of Colonel John Harvie, Edwin James, died of injuries received at the burning of the Richmond Theatre in 1811, in a vain attempt to rescue his sister, Julia, and niece, Mary Whitlock, from the doomed building. The remains of Edwin James Harvie, Julia Harvie and Mary Whitlock rest together, and their names are inscribed on the monument in the Monumental Church, Richmond, Virginia, with the names of the other victims of that appalling conflagration.

At the time of his death he was an officer in the Bank of Virginia. He left a widow, who was a Miss Hardaway, of Amelia County, Virginia, and two sons, Lewis E. and John B. The first lived in Amelia County and the last in Powhatan County, Virginia.

4th. Colonel John Harvie's youngest son, General Jacqueline B. Harvie, the last survivor of his children, was a lieutenant in the United States Navy and fought with Decatur in the Bay of Algiers. After resigning his commission in the navy, he represented the city of Richmond in the Senate of Virginia. General Harvie lived and died in Richmond, having devoted his life and means to the city's growth and interests. He married Mary, the only daughter of Chief Justice John Marshall.

The children of this marriage were three sons—John Marshall, a lieutenant in the United States Army, who died about 1845; William W. and Lewis, all unmarried, and six daughters: Mary, married Dr. S. Patrick; Ellen, married Colonel F. G. Ruffin, Virginia; Susan, married Rev. Anderson Wade; Ann and Emily both unmarried and resided at the old Marshall home up to a few years of their death.

5th. Gabriella, the eldest daughter of Colonel John Harvie, was twice married; first to Thomas Mann Randolph, of "Tuckahoe" and to them was born one child, Thomas Mann Randolph, Jr.; her second husband was Dr. John Brockenbrough, for many years president of the State Bank of Virginia, leaving no issue by this marriage.

6th. His second daughter, Emily, was twice married; first to Mr. Whitlock, leaving one daughter, Mary, who was burned in the Richmond Theatre disaster, and secondly to Mr. McCraw, without issue.

7th. Julia, the youngest daughter, was burned in the Richmond Theatre fire.

The two sons of Edwin James Harvie—Lewis Edwin and John B.—married respectively two sisters, daughters of John G. Blair, Esq., of the City of Richmond, namely, Sarah Blair and Mary E. Blair. John G. Blair was the son of the Rev. John D. Blair ("Parson Blair"), and his wife was Sarah Anne Eyre Heron, of Glasgow, Scotland.

His eldest son, Lewis E. Harvie, Esq., of Amelia County, Va., was president of the Richmond and Danville Railroad during the Civil War and for a number of years represented Amelia, Powhatan and Nottaway counties in the Legislature of Virginia. He had eight sons and four daughters.

1st. Colonel Edwin James Harvie, late inspector general of the Army of Tennessee, C. S. A.; was a graduate of the Virginia Military Institute and prior to the outbreak of the Civil War was a first lieutenant of infantry in the United States Army. He married Edmonia, daughter of Hodijah Meade, of Amelia County, and had issue: Sarah Blair, Jane Rutherford, Pattie H. and Edmonia Meade.

2nd. Major John Blair Harvie, born April 24, 1836, died at his home in Richmond May 22, 1913. When war was declared between the States Major Harvie was in the service of the government at Washington in the capacity of civil engineer. He helped in the construction of the Richmond and Danville railroad and was associated with the engineers in charge of the construction of the Washington aqueduct. When Virginia seceded he responded at once to the call of his State and became an officer on the staff of General Jubal A. Early. Major Harvie married Mary Bell Anderson, of "Edgehill", Montgomery County, Virginia, daughter of George W. and Sarah Kent Anderson, and had issue: Irving, died in infancy; George Anderson, deceased; Sarah Blair, Lewis Edwin, John Skelton, Julien Binford, deceased; James Blair, deceased; Willie Gordon, Walter Blair, Llewellyn Kent, Mary Douglas Anderson.

3rd. Pattie Hardaway, third child of Lewis E. and Sarah B. Harvie, married Dr. Armistead G. Taylor, son of Dr. Richard Taylor of Amelia County, Va., and had four children: Sarah Blair, Lewis Harvie, William Byrd, and Pattie Armistead.

Dr. Taylor was a graduate of the Hanover Academy and the Medical College of Virginia, and was a student at the University of Virginia when war between the States broke. He at once enlisted in an Amelia troop, and was made second lieutenant on the staff of General Beverley Robertson, whose brigade served as a part of Stuart's Cavalry. It was stated by the late Dr. Hunter H. McGuire that Dr. Taylor diagnosed the first case of appendicitis ever recognized in Virginia.

4th. Major William Old Harvie, born Dec. 21, 1839, married Ann Maria Jefferson. Major William Harvie was a Confederate veteran and served throughout the entire war.

He was born at "Dykeland", Amelia County, Dec. 21, 1839. He was educated at the University of Virginia. At the time of the John Brown raid at Harper's Ferry, Major Harvie was a member of Company F, First Virginia Infantry, which took part in the move to capture Brown. He was a member of the same company when war broke out between the States. He soon attained the rank of Major, but later left his battalion to become a staff officer at the headquarters of General Robert E. Lee, where he acted as assistant to Colonel Cole. He surrendered at Appomattox. Major Harvie at the time of his death was commander of the Amelia Camp of Confederate veterans.

5th. Charles Irving Harvie was educated at the University of Virginia and with a company made up of his fellow students went to Harper's Ferry in 1860 at the time of John Brown's raid. In 1861 he entered the Confederate Army as a private soldier, but was afterwards promoted and made lieutenant on the staff of General McCausland. He served his State with distinction and fell at Cedarville, Virginia, leading a charge against the enemy, November 12, 1864, eight days after his promotion to the rank of captain and assistant adjutant general. He died at Winchester, whither he was carried, on November 14th, aged twenty-two years. His remains rest in Hollywood Cemetery, Richmond, Va.

6th. Courtney Blair, born Feb. 25, 1845; married George Keith Taylor, son of Dr. Richard Taylor, and had seven children: Richard F., Rosalie G., Mary Byrd, E. Harvie, Martha, Courtney Blair and George Keith.

7th. James Seddon was a cadet at the Virginia Military Institute, at Lexington, when his corps volunteered for service in the field and took part in the battle of New Market. The gallantry of the New Market cadets has gone down as a tradition in the military annals of the South. Mr. Harvie was never married and died at the old Harvie estate in Amelia County, Va.

8th and 9th. Josephine Blair, born May 28, 1848, died 1915, unmarried. Judith N., twin sister to Josephine, died in childhood.

10th. Strother, civil engineer, born July 19, 1850, died unmarried.

11th and 12th. Charles, born Nov. 10, 1852, died Jan. 1927. He was a civil engineer and was never married.

Lewis, twin brother to Charles, born Nov. 10, 1852, died Oct. 3, 1888, unmarried.
